

A HYBRID BANK NOTE.

Good for $20 on One Side and $10 on the Other.

HOW THE "FREAK" WAS PRINTED.

Two of them were made and one is still wandering about the country. The day's proceedings in the Senate and House of Representatives. The bill for the return of second-class mail matter—Capital Callings.

WASHINGTON CITY, April 30.—An extraordinary note was received at the treasury department for redemption a few days ago. It was a $20 note or a $10 note, just according to which side was up, for by mistake the one side was printed with the figures and devices of a $20 bill, while the other had all the figures and devices of a $10. The note was returned to the treasury by the cashier of the First Washington National bank, of Jersey City, who sent it with a rather sarcastic note, intimating that his bank was not going into the bank business, and added that the treasury had counted that bill for $20, he was willing to send him an ordinary $20 note. The matter was referred to the department of issue, from which the note had been sent out to the Jersey City bank.

An Inevitable Mistake.

The mistake was promptly corrected and an immediate investigation was begun. This mistake having occurred in one note, it must have occurred in more. All bank notes are printed in blocks of four on one sheet and 25 sheets in one bundle, so that there are 100 notes worked off at one printing. It is therefore probable that the error occurred in the printing of the entire bundle. It seems that the four notes printed on a sheet are not all of one denomination. There are always three of one kind and the fourth of another; thus, in this case three tens and a twenty.

How the Error Occurred.

It was an easy task to learn just when this bundle had been printed and by which plate printers. They were examined, and it was determined that one sheet of four notes, after having been printed on one side, had fallen off the bundle to the floor. The assistant who picked it up by some unfortunate oversight had turned the sheet upside down when she placed it on the bundle. The rest is easily understood. This sheet was printed on the second side, with a twenty figure on the reverse of a ten, and one of the three tens on the reverse of the one twenty of the ten. Hence there were two "twenty-tens" in the lot. No trace has yet been found of the second hybrid, which must be wandering around the country. The treasury department is anxiously waiting to hear from it. The two notes will be kept in the treasury's office as rare curiosities.

They demand the eight-hour day and a small increase in wages.

This arrangement, of course, does not include the old Master Carpenters' association, whose members still refuse to treat with the carpenters as a union, although having canceled the eight-hour day and other important demands.

FATHER MCANNA'S REMARKS.

They Have Caused Considerable Excitement.

Father McAnna, the pastor, Father Dunn, of St. Paul's church, and Father Foy, of the Church of the Sacred Heart, all of the church, while Father McAnna was preaching. Father McAnna is reported in an interview in a local paper as saying:

"I speak to my people and the citizens at large to state positively that the sermon was in direct opposition to my will and to my sentiments. I did not even give the sanction of my presence, for after listening for a time to the attack I openly left the church. I regarded it as altogether out of place, and would have taken occasion to correct the speaker at the time if I thought it would do more harm than good. I deeply regret the occurrence, and say again I do not sanction it."

Left and Head First from a Train.

COLUMBUS, S. C., April 30.—A remarkable feat was made from a moving train Sunday by Vince Story, an escaped convict, who had been recaptured in Georgia and was being taken to the penitentiary. Story was in a cage at the rear of the train, and he jumped out of the cage and ran to the front of the train. While the train was passing through a hilly country at the rate of forty miles an hour the prisoner was left alone for a moment. He immediately sprang, head first, through an open window. The train was stopped as soon as the prisoner was seen, and he was taken to the hospital where he is now recovering.

CLAYTON'S ASSASSINS.

Progress of the Investigation at Little Rock.

MANY NEGRO WITNESSES TESTIFY.

Robert T. Pate Tells the Congressional Committee What He Knows of the Stealing of the Ballot-Box and the Murder of Mr. Clayton—How Deputy Sheriff Bentley Tracked the Assassins and Found a Revolver.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 30.—One hundred and four colored witnesses from Howard township testified before the Clayton-Breckinridge committee Tuesday that they voted for John M. Clayton for congress in November, 1888. During the afternoon Oliver T. Bentley and Robert T. Pate were put on the stand and examined as to what they knew about the stealing of the ballot-box of that township. Pate said he left the polls before they closed and went to his saloon, where he got a drink and from there went home to his supper. After supper he went to Smith's drug store, and while there, Hobbs, one of the election judges, came in and told him four armed men entered the polling-place and made the judges and clerks stand with their faces to the wall while they carried away the ballot-box.

Pate Swore that the Night Clayton was assassinated he was in his saloon, naming several persons who were also there at the time with him. When told that Clayton had been killed he went over to the house and remained there about an hour. The following day he served on the jury that held an inquest on the body. The inquest occupied about four hours. Only a few witnesses were examined, no information being obtained as to who committed the deed. Oliver T. Bentley, deputy sheriff of Conway county, was at home when a messenger arrived and informed him of the death of Clayton. Bentley lives at Morrilltown about eight miles from Plummerville, where Clayton was assassinated.

Tracking the Murderers.

As soon as he could secure a horse he left for Plummerville, arriving there about 8 o'clock in the morning. He examined the premises where Clayton was killed, and about three feet from the window through which the shot was fired he discovered the tracks of two men. Both were rubber-soled shoes. He followed the tracks a distance of about 100 yards, where they were obliterated by those of the crowd that congregated about the house during the night and that morning. He also found a pistol, a new Smith & Wesson, 44-caliber No. 109. The deputy sheriff made diligent effort to find out to whom the pistol belonged, but failed to do so.

The Contestee's Counsel.

When the counsel for the contestant commenced to examine the witnesses connected with the Clayton case, Judge Clayton assailed him. Judge McCain, counsel for the contestee, said he was present to represent Mr. Breckinridge in the contest for his seat in congress and not on the other two issues and would not therefore cross-examine any witness. He would not throw any obstacles in the way of the parties to the investigation in their efforts to discover who stole the ballot-box and to hunt down the murderer of Clayton. Mr. Stockbridge said that no man in the county was more interested in finding out who stole the ballot-boxes and who assassinated Clayton than he was. He desired that the fullest latitude should be given the investigation, and informed his counsel that he desired them to represent him on these issues as he desired.

The Kennel's Will.

NEW YORK, April 30.—The World quotes Judge Wallace as saying: "The Kennel will be granted to Kennel's Buffalo counsel on application of a well-known New York lawyer. It was defective in that it did not bear Kennel's signature nor the seal of the court, but the situation was such an urgent one that I could not justify myself in refusing to deliberate over technicalities. The man was liable to be executed at any moment; and having in my mind a doubt of the constitutionality of the law by which he was to meet his doom I signed the paper."

A Bigamist Sentenced.

BERKSHIRE, Iowa, April 30.—William Delap, Burlington's celebrated bigamist, was arraigned in court Tuesday. Three of his wives appeared against him and he was sentenced to one year in the penitentiary at Fort Madison, where he was taken. He is charged with bigamy for receiving his sentence by a judge if going to the penitentiary would release him from all his wives. He heaved a troubled sigh when the judge assured him in the negative.

HE WORE SPECS, ANYHOW.

Arrest of a Postoffice Inspector by an Illinois Town Marshal.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 30.—Postoffice Inspector C. E. Herring, who is attached to the Chicago division, has the distinction of an arrest by the town marshal of Mount Pulaski. He was on his way from Clinton to Springfield. When the train stopped at Pulaski a man boarded the train, walked slowly down the aisle of the coach, halted in front of the postoffice inspector, and laying his hand on the inspector's shoulder said: "Come with me; you are under arrest."

The Inspector at first thought it a joke, but the man said he was town marshal and must be obeyed. The inspector asked to see the warrant. "Hain't got no warrant," said the town marshal, "but here, read that," and he handed the astonished inspector a telegram from Clinton saying that if a man of such and such description was on the train arrest him.

Condemned to Prison the Marshal

"But I am a postoffice inspector," protested Mr. Herring, "and, besides, that description don't fit me." He showed the town marshal his passes and letters, but that official simply said: "Oh, you can't fool me, old fellow; you wear specs." Dismayed, the inspector asked to see the warrant. "Hain't got no warrant," said the town marshal, "but here, read that," and he handed the astonished inspector a telegram from Clinton saying that if a man of such and such description was on the train arrest him.

The Inspector saw the uselessness of further argument, and, getting off the train, went with the marshal. The whole town turned out to get a look at the distinguished criminal whom their marshal had arrested. He was taken to the telegraph office, and after communicating by wire with the sheriff at Clinton he was at length released, and took an afternoon freight train for Springfield.

DECLARED THE LAW VOID.

A Legislative Error Gives Michigan Some

LANSING, Mich., April 30.—The supreme court has decided that the liquor law as passed at the last session of the legislature is null and void, as the act which was enacted and signed by the governor was not the act which that body passed. It further holds that the act of 1887 must now govern the liquor traffic. The case was brought by Ed Rolle, of Detroit, against the county treasurer of Wayne, the defendant being backed by the Brewers and Malsters' association of Michigan.

Object of the Measure.

The object of the bill as introduced was simply to amend section 1 of the act of 1887, which provided for the sale of liquor by the retail. The bill was introduced by a new act to take the place of the law enacted three years before. After the bill was passed the title was amended. The bill was considered by two conference committees before the house agreed to the amendments made by the senate.

How the Mistake Occurred.

A mistake was made in making up the bill for the enrolling clerk, whereby portions of a rejected report of a conference committee were injected into the act as enrolled and approved by the governor. The act of 1887 provided a uniform tax of $300 for saloons and $500 for hotels and in place of $300 for malt and $500 for spirits as provided in the law of 1887.

Child Murder and Suicide.

ROCHESTER, Minn., April 30.—Financial and domestic troubles prompted Richard Snitke, farmer, living four miles south of this city, to murder his own child, a boy of 3 years, and then kill himself. Snitke, before coming to America in 1882, held a high commission in the Prussian army, being the son of a baron owning vast estates near Pommern. He lost a fortune at the original gold and silver mine with his wife, child, and mother-in-law. At 8 o'clock at night, cherishing a fit of despondency, he cut his child's throat from ear to ear and then sent a bullet into his own brain, dying instantly.

The Rock Island Arsenal Damaged.

DAYTON, Ohio, April 30.—Damage to the amount of $30,000 or more was done to property at the Rock Island arsenal by an overflow. A new water power dam is being built on the south side of the government island, and to protect this work coffer dams have been constructed above and below it, and the high water wore its way around the coffer dams, and washed away some 50,000 yards of earth, and the water cut into the island fifty feet deep by 300 in length. The work of dam building will be delayed for weeks.

Bloody Fight Between Fishermen.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 30.—The union and non-union fishermen had a sanguinary encounter on the Columbia river about forty miles from here. Both parties were armed with rifles. One of the combatants, Jack Hayman, was killed outright, and Charles O'Brien, of Wilson, was seriously injured. The conflict was the outcome of an attempt on the part of the union men to prevent the non-unionists from fishing along the river. The non-unionists are selling fish at greatly reduced prices.

Opium Smuggled in Lemon Binds.

CHICAGO, April 30.—A clever smuggling scheme was brought to light in Justice Bradley's court Wednesday morning. Jack Lee's opium den at 378 Clark street was raided Monday night, and a quantity of smoking paraphernalia were found, including lemon binds, each containing about two ounces of the narcotic paste. The lemons had been cut at the end, the pulp and seeds removed and the opium packed in. The cover is then sealed with colored cement and all traces of the contraband.

RIVER STEAMER AFIRE.

The Vessel Destroyed and Three Lives Lost.

THE PASSENGERS PANIC-STRICKEN.

Aroused from Their Sleep by the Alarm of Fire a Number of Them Jump Overboard—The Captain's Coolness Prevented a Terrible Loss of Life—Accident During a Show Parade at Cleveland, Ohio—Other Mishaps.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 30.—The H. B. Plant, a St. Johns river steamer of the People's line of the Plant system, was destroyed by fire early Tuesday morning in Beresford lake, a large sheet opening out of St. Johns river, 100 miles south of this city, causing the loss of three lives—one deck passenger, John Collins; one deck hand, and Albert Mallory, a waiter boy, all colored. An alarm was first sounded at 4:30, when the entire forward part of the vessel blazed up. The chief cook and deck hands woke up the passengers and all were in a horrible state of fright and alarm. Half-dressed and nude passengers jumped overboard and in their fright began swimming away from the landing. Capt. H. B. Plant, however, remained on the deck and cast off, and held her beside the burning vessel, revolver in hand. He then called for women and children and put them in first, not letting a man approach. These were landed and then all others were rescued, all in nearly a minute's time. The captain's coolness saved the lives of all.

A Thrilling Experience.

J. T. Thwait, of Columbus, Ga., one of the passengers, who had his wife and two little boys on board, had quite a thrilling experience. He was asleep when the alarm was given and when he woke up the cabin was full of smoke. Before he had a chance to save anything he got his wife and children up on deck, and with one life-preserver between them he told them to jump into the river, as the flames were doing so much to the cabin. They did so and were picked up by the agent at Deerfoot landing, who came to their rescue in a canoe. The Thwait family were very timely clad, the two little boys having nothing on but their night gowns. Mrs. Thwait was a wrapper, while Mr. Thwait was in his night shirt.
